Answer

Trace the printed outline of the bird, color the body yellow, the wing blue, the beak orange, and the eye black, then redraw the same bird freehand in the blank draw box using the same four colors.

Reasoning

The key fixes the colors before any drawing begins, so the trace stage and the draw stage use identical colors. Tracing first gives the hand the shape, and the freehand redraw then tests whether that shape can be rebuilt without the printed guide.

Check

Compare the trace box and the draw box: the same four parts (body, wing, beak, eye) should appear in both, with the same colors from the key.
