Full Alphabet Trace-Over Practice Rows: Dotted Letters with Start Dots and Arrows

Worked example / complete source key

A learner traces the letter 'c' twice on a row where the start dot is at the top right of the letter zone and the arrow curves left and down. The first trace starts at the dot but stops halfway. The second trace starts at the dot and completes the curve but rises slightly above the midline. The independent 'c' in the blank space starts at the dot and stays within the zone. Using the convention, describe what is acceptable and what to adjust.

Answer: The first trace is not yet acceptable because it stops halfway and does not complete the letter shape. The second trace is acceptable in start point and direction, and the slight rise above the midline is a minor fit issue to adjust rather than a wrong answer. The independent 'c' is acceptable because it starts at the dot and stays within the zone. Next step: trace one more 'c' while keeping the curve below the midline, then write one independent 'c' and compare.
