Eyes Drawing Styles: Cartoon, Anime, and Realistic Side by Side

Original task 1 / independent drawing and calculation

Task 1

Draw three aligned columns with a shared baseline and midline. In the cartoon column, draw a bold upper lid and a large circular iris that touches the upper lid. In the anime column, draw a defined upper lid with a short eyelash line and a vertical oval iris. In the realistic column, draw an upper lid with a subtle fold and a circular iris slightly covered by both lids. Add one highlight per column: large for cartoon, sharp for anime, small and soft for realistic.

Task 2

Using the same three-column layout, redraw the cartoon eye but make the lower lid visible and thin. Then redraw the anime eye with a smaller pupil and a second sharp highlight. Finally, redraw the realistic eye with a slightly larger visible sclera area by raising the upper lid line. Label what changed in each column.

Task 3

Draw a single row with three eye outlines side by side, all sharing the same iris diameter. In the first outline, overlap the upper lid by one-third of the iris height. In the second, overlap the upper lid by one-half. In the third, overlap the upper lid by two-thirds. Label each outline with the overlap fraction and describe how the visible iris shape changes.

Original task 4 / independent drawing and calculation

Task 4

Create a comparison table with three rows (cartoon, anime, realistic) and three columns (upper lid, iris shape, highlight). Fill each cell with a short description based on your drawings. Then draw one new eye in each style that follows your table descriptions.
