Contour Drawing of a King: Outline Study with Crown and Robe

Ordinary topic reference / separately checked pixels

Contour Drawing of a King: Outline Study with Crown and Robe

Original worked example / unchanged complete key

Prompt: A student draws a king in the slow-contour box. The crown is a band with three points, the robe is a trapezoid widening from 4 cm at the shoulders to 7 cm at the hem, and two legs extend 3 cm below the hem. The student adds a belt line across the robe. Is this a valid contour drawing for the brief?

Answer: No. The belt line is interior detail and falls outside the contour brief, which excludes costume detail. The crown, robe, and legs are acceptable, but the belt must be removed. The measurements are hypothetical examples and do not affect validity.