Draw Anime Hair Strands with Head-Angle Perspective

Original worked example / unchanged complete key

Prompt: A three-quarter head frame has the midline shifted toward the visible side. Draw five hair strands: three on the visible side sweeping forward, two on the far side compressed. Check that each strand root touches the crown or hairline.

Answer: Draw the cranium circle and shifted midline. Mark the crown and hairline. On the visible side, draw three curved arrows from crown to forward tips. On the far side, draw two shorter arrows that end near the head edge. Block thick clumps first, then add thin strands. Trace each strand back to its root; all five should connect to the crown or hairline. The far-side strands should be fewer and shorter, showing the head blocks them.
