How to Draw Male Anime Hair in Angled Perspective

Ordinary topic reference / separately checked pixels

How to Draw Male Anime Hair in Angled Perspective

Original worked example / unchanged complete key

Prompt: A head is drawn in three-quarter view facing left. The cranium oval is 6 units wide and 8 units tall. The midline is shifted 1 unit left. The hairline is 2 units below the top of the oval. Block the top mass, near side mass, and far side mass, then add strand arrows. Describe the result.

Answer: The top mass sits above the crown and spans about 4 units wide, following the oval curve. The near side mass (right side of the page) is about 2 units wide and drops toward the ear. The far side mass (left side) is about 1 unit wide and partly hidden. Strand arrows on the near side curve outward and down, about 2 units long. Far-side arrows are about 1 unit long and point more steeply. The fringe mass hangs from the hairline and overlaps the forehead by about 1 unit. The silhouette shows three clear masses, and the far hair stays within the oval.